Shuswap Home Repair and Construction

by Goody Niosi

Big or small, Shuswap Home Repair and Construction does it all. It doesn't matter if it's just a stuck door that needs to be fixed or if every room in the house needs updating - Stewart Fuson's company handles it with efficiency and with work that is guaranteed and recognized for its quality.

Fuson founded his company in 2002. He started by doing the small jobs that larger contractors didn't want to handle. Today he boasts about two dozen property managers and strata developments as regular clients.

Three years ago his business evolved from repairing decks to building decks, canopies, railings, awnings, garages and workshops. Today he works with expert trades people to handle just about any project a homeowner needs handled. "We've been completely renovating whole houses," Fuson says. "We go through every room and fix what they have and refinish it."

Recently Shuswap Home Repair and Construction completed a two month project where every room in the house was updated including a brand new kitchen. "It looks like a brand new house," Fuson says. "But we blended the old with the new so that it looks really good."

People have learned to trust Shuswap Home Repair and Construction. The company does what it says it will and its work is always top quality. Fuson points out that he guarantees everything he does. "I do good work," he says. "If there's ever an issue, I come back and I fix it."

Fuson has now developed two separate departments of his company: one to handle the small repairs he is so well known for and one to handle the larger projects. He says he enjoys working on large renovations and plans to increase that side of the business. However, he doesn't want to give up the repair side of the business. "I always want to have the time to do the small jobs," he says.
